

ART 6.1 Employ Air and Missile Defense

The air defense system protects the force from missile attack, air attack, and aerial surveillance by any of the following: interceptor missiles, ballistic missiles, cruise missiles, conventional fixed- and rotary-wing aircraft, and unmanned aircraft systems. It prevents enemies from interdicting friendly forces, while freeing commanders to synchronize movement and firepower. All members of the combined arms team perform air defense tasks; however, ground-based air defense artillery units execute most Army air defense operations. ART 6.1 includes fires at aerial platforms by both dedicated air defense systems and non-dedicated weapon systems.(FM 3-27) (USASMDC
