ART 2.2.2 Perform Situation Development

Situation development is a process for analyzing information and producing current intelligence concerning the portions of the mission variables of enemy, terrain, and weather, and civil considerations within the area of operations before and during operations. The process helps the intelligence officer recognize and interpret indicators of threat intentions, and objectives. Situation development confirms or denies threat courses of actions (COAs), provides threat locations, explains what the threat is doing in relation to the friendly force commander's intent, and provides an estimate of threat combat effectiveness. The locations and actions of noncombatant elements and nongovernmental organizations in the area of operations that may impact operations should also be considered. Through situation development, the intelligence officer guickly identifies information gaps, explains threat activities in relation to the unit's operations, and assists the commander in gaining and maintaining situational understanding. Situation development helps the commander make decisions, including when to execute branches and sequels. (FM 2-0) (USAICoE)
